DODGE, JOSEPH M.: Papers, 1952-1964

SCOPE AND CONTENT

This file contains correspondence, mimeographed sheets, news clippings, and publications, pertaining to Mr. Dodge's various government positions from 1952 to 1964. The more conspicuous areas of possible interest in this file are the Federal budget, the Dixon-Yates controversy, and the United States military assistance programs. In addition, there are several items pertaining to Mr. Dodge's views on Japanese banking and economics, and to the views of Mr. Dodge and Gen. Lucius Clay on Fidel Castro's demand for ransom for captured participants in the Bay of Pigs invasion.

The file falls in two components. The first component, Boxes 1 thru 5, covers the years 1958 to 1959 and is related to Mr. Dodge's position as a member of the President's Committee to Study the U. S. Military Assistance Program. Initially, arrangement is alphabetical by subject, followed by mimeographed sheets about the military assistance program, apparently given to members for their information. These sheets are arranged chronologically.

The second component, Boxes 6 thru 11, covers the years 1952 to 1964 and is Mr. Dodge's personal file. It contains items relating to the positions outlined on the first page of this inventory. Arrangement is alphabetical by subject.

Box 12 contains publications.

The Council on foreign Economic Policy was established on December 22, 1954 pursuant to letter of the President to Joseph M. Dodge of December 12, 1954. The purpose of the council was to coordinate the foreign economic policy of the U.S. of concern to the different departments and agencies of the Executive Branch, and to provide for the simplification of the various coordinating mechanisms dealing with foreign economic policy. Dodge served as Chairman of the Council from December 11, 1954 until mid-July, 1956. The Chairman from July 10, 1956 until January 20, 1961 was Clarence B. Randall.

The Secretaries of State, Treasury, commerce, Agriculture, and the Director of the Foreign Operations Administration, or their principal deputies comprised the initial basic membership of the Council. In December 1954, John Foster Dulles, George M. Humphrey, Sinclair Weeks, Ezra Taft Benson, and Harold E. Stassen served on the council. Initial ex officio members included Gabriel Hauge, Administrative Assistant for Economic affairs; Robert Cutler, Special Assistant for national Security Affairs; and Nelson Rockefeller, Special Assistant in the field of development of increased national understanding and cooperation.

The council on foreign Economic Policy continued in existence on January 20, 1961.

The President's committee to Study the U.S. Military Assistance Program was established informally by the President. A letter from the President to the Chairman of the committee on November 24, 1958 outlined the purpose of the committee. The Committee was to undertake a completely independent, objective and non-partisan analysis of the military assistance aspects of the country's Mutual Security Program; and provide a forthright evaluation of the extent to which future military assistance can advance U.S. national security and foreign policy interests.

Initial members of the Committee William, H. Draper, Jr., chairman, Dillon Anderson, Joseph M. Dodge, Alfred M. Gruenther, Marx Leva, John J. McCloy, George McGhee, Joseph T. McNarney, Arthur W. Radford, and James E. Webb. The final report of the Committee was submitted to the President in September 1959.
